Thank you for sharing your stories, recording someone else's stories, or being ready with the defense of our freedoms

Goals of MorningStar Cultural Arts Group's Participation:

- To educate the public about the valuable service of our veterans to our country.
- To get people to take an interest in the preservation of veterans' memories.
- To train the public to conduct these interviews.
- To take this proud legacy and transform it into a medium acceptable to the Library of Congress for their archives.
- To form coalitions with other organizations working towards the preservation of these documents.
- To thank veterans for their participation by giving them a copy of the interview and a certificate for participation.
- To preserve these histories in our own community by donations to the local library and archives

About MorningStar Cultural Arts Group

Mission

MorningStar Cultural Arts Group engages in a wide array of charitable endeavors to help empower or educate the citizens of the coastal empire and has done so since 1989.

2006-7 Programming Objectives

Our programs are multi-generational and multi-cultural as we attempt to bridge gaps in communities to strengthen Savannah and the surrounding cities. Recently the MStarArts board received a certificate of honor from Ft. Stewart for our charitable work for the military.

This Season: Film Camp was offered at the Savannah Entrepreneurial Center, for thirty middle-to-high school students. It introduced film and film make-up as a career choice to students who may not have thought creatively about non-traditional futures that are opened to them. This was the second in a series.

Tonight's Veteran's Salute is the culmination event, of our two-year participation collecting WW II Veteran's oral histories for the Library of Congress. If you are a Jewish War Veteran who served in WW II, Korea or Vietnam, and would like to tell your story, call and make an appointment to be interviewed by John Dickinson, Coastal Oral History Project at 912-604-3250. This one-hour appointment will produce an interview copy for you and one for the Library of Congress as well as all of the paper work for only $50.

Starting January 2007, WIN (Women's Independence Network) is a two-year initiative to teach rising female artists, through mentored experiences, to market their skills and to impact society with enhanced self-esteem and increased participation in the electorate. Stressing entrepreneurship (2007) and being heard through the electorate (2008), WIN Weekend, will be our first Women's Cultural and Fine Arts Festival scheduled for March 29- April 1, 2007.

For the first time ever, MorningStar has these and other programs on our interactive website www.morningstararts.org in order to showcase some of our cultural offerings for the city.

Please visit our site often and support our good works. Thank you.

The City of Savannah Connection: Funding for the original production of Our Faces Have Many Voices, written by oral historian Miriam Perrone and performed in February 2005, came from the combined funding from Very Special Arts and the Bureau of Cultural Affairs in Savannah. The March 2005 production of The Hours of Our Lives was also funded in part by one of the first Weave-A-Dream Grants provided by the City of Savannah Cultural Arts—one of the first grants creative director Carol M. Towbin Greenberg ever co-wrote. Those two, plus the program Jumor, were sponsored in part by generous funding by the City as part of the series entitled With Pride in Service designed to entertain, but also to attract and train multi-generational volunteers and to engage the target population of veterans. MorningStar truly appreciates the Department of Cultural Affairs' support of small arts organizations and the public's support of our work.
